Prize Fight Pictures Prohibited

Toronto, Ont.—No moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight will be seen in the province of Ontario. An order in council was passed at a meeting of the provincial cabinet on July 7th prohibiting the exhibition of prize fight moving pictures in Ontario.

This will apply to all prize fight pictures, but it is aimed at the Jeffries-Johnson fight. The penalty for breach of this will be a fine of not less than $200 and a further fine of $25 per day after conviction.

Several towns and cities in the U. S. are also forbidding the showing of these pictures. In fact there seems to be a world-wide demand that these pictures be not shown and it is likely that the Companies interested in making them will be requested to destroy the films for a compensation.

A great deal of adverse criticism is being levelled against showing the moving pictures of the recent prize fight all over the world and no doubt a great deal of this is caused by the fact that a black man won out. But it is hoped that there is a better feeling than this behind the movement against such brutal exhibitions of the pugilistic skill, and anything that is done to overcome the feeling amongst certain classes for this degrading sport should be upheld. No doubt since so many of the larger cities are taking up the matter of prohibiting these moving pictures, the companies who handle them will try to show them in the smaller places, and if it is so it is to be hoped that the management of houses in which these pictures can be exhibited, will have the good sense to close their doors against them and so support the movement against these degrading exhibitions. The Provincial Legislature could help to a very great extent by making laws against exhibiting these pictures.

Cash vs. Credit

The departmental store sells for cash—nothing leaves its counters which has not been paid for. The country storekeeper gives more or less credit, and though he may make few bad debts, he loses the interest on his capital. With profits cut down to what they are, little, often nothing is made out of the customer who settles once a year. Were no goods to go out of the country store without being paid for, its owner could, in staple goods for which there is a steady demand, undersell any city concern. In the credit system the country dealer has his enemy and until he overcomes him he will see goods coming from Winnipeg to customers whose names are on his books. In a dairy section like this, where the farmer does not as he did in the old time, have to wait until the fall to change his produce into money, there is no reason why the rate in all dealings should not be spot cash. Were that the rule there could be no interference to pass the door of the local storekeeper who is a useful member of the community and whose disappearance would be a loss.

Semi-Steel Fire-Pot—Not Gray Iron

A FIRE-POT of a furnace should be able to endure tremendous heat and to repel the attacks of sulphur fumes.

The material commonly used for a fire-pot is gray iron. The Sunshine fire-pot is Semi-Steel.

Now, avoiding technical terms, gray iron has what may be called "open" pores. Through these "open" pores the destructive sulphur fumes attack the iron and hasten disintegration.

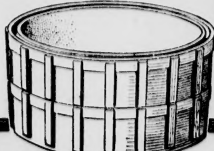

On the other hand, Semi-Steel is a close-grained material, with a smooth-as-glass surface which practically seals or "closes" up the pores. Semi-Steel easily repels the attacks of gas fumes and thus greatly prolongs the life of the fire-pot.

A Semi-Steel fire-pot weighs 20 per cent. heavier than the same size and pattern in gray iron. It is therefore better able to endure tremendous heat.

Semi-Steel is made by an exclusive McClary process. You can only get a Semi-Steel fire-pot with a McClary furnace. That is one strong reason why you should have the Sunshine installed in your home. Our agent in your locality will tell you many other reasons. Ask him.

Remember, the Sunshine is guaranteed by the largest makers of furnaces in British Empire, to heat your home to your entire satisfaction.

CHAPTER XII.

THE LANTERN ABOVE.

CHASE sat for hours on his porch that night gazing down upon the chateau. Lights gleamed in a hundred of its windows. The utterance of his own isolation, the certainties that circumstance had forced upon him, would have been maddening on this night had not all manner been tempered by the glorious achievement in the market place. He wondered if the princess knew what he had dared and what he had accomplished in the early hours of the night. He wondered if they had pointed out his solitary light to her—if he now and then she bestowed a casual glance upon that twinkling star of his. The porch lantern hung almost directly above his head.

The chateau was indeed the home of mystery. The tales of strange spirits of those who had dwelt therein for months in solitude arose in the wild stamper for freedom. All petty differences between Lady Deppingham and Drusilla Browne, and they were quite common now, were forgotten in the whirlwind of relief that came with the strangers from the city. Mrs. Browne's good looking, eager husband revelled in the prospect of this delicious night, this almost Arabian night. He was seated at the table by the radiant princess, the Scherazade of his boyhood dreams. His little heart thumped as it did not do since he was a boy, the princess of N. and the handsome Marchioness of B. came into his tired, hungry life at a moment when it most needed the light. It was he who fairly dragged Lady Agnes aside and proposed the banquet, the dance, the concert—everything—and it was he who carried out the hundred spasmodic instructions that she gave.

Late in the night, long after the dinner and the dance, the tired but happy company flocked to the picturesque hanging garden for rest and the last refreshment.

The hanging garden was a wonderfully constructed open air place suspended between the chateau itself and the great cliff that rose above it. The cliff towered at least a few feet above the roof of the spreading chateau, a veritable stone wall that extended for a mile or more in either direction.

Near the chateau there was a real waterfall, reminding one in no small measure of the great falls at Lauer, brunen or Glenbow. The water, which obtained life from these falls, big and little, ran along the base of the cliff for some distance and was then diverted by means of a deep, artificial channel into an almost complete circuit of the chateau, forming the moat. It spread along the foot of the upper terrace, a wide torrent that washed between solid walls of masonry, which rose to a height of not less than ten feet either side. There were two drawbridges, seldom used, but always practicable. A small stationary bridge crossed the delicious stream immediately below the hanging garden and led to the ladders by which one ascended to the caverns that ran far back into the cliff. Two big black irregular holes in the face of the cliff marked the entrance to these deep, rambling caves, wonderful caverns wrought by the action of the dead volcano, cracks made by these splintering earthquakes when the island was new.

The garden hung high between the building and the cliff, swung by a score of great steel cables. These cables were riveted solidly in the solid rock of the cliff at one end and fastened as safely to the stone walls of the chateau at the other. It swung stanchly from its moorings with the constancy of a suspension bridge and trembled at the slightest touch.

It was at least a hundred feet square. The four corners were a foot or more of wall, in which the rich grass and plants of the tropics flourished. Cool fountains sprayed the air at either end of the green inclosure. The illusion was complete.

The walls surrounding the garden were three feet high and were intended to represent the walls of the hanging garden wall of brick. To gain access to the hanging garden one crossed a narrow bridge which led from the second balcony of the chateau. It was not an hour in the day when protection from the sun could not be found in this little paradise. Bobby Browne was holding forth with his usual exuberance on the magnificence of the British navy.

"There she is now, sleeping out there in the harbor, a great big thing with the kindest of hearts inside of those steel ribs—her majesty's ship the King's Own. Think of it. Her crew, aye, thirty ships, she stops off at this beastly island to catch her breath and to see that she's safe, then she charges off into the horizon like a bird that has no home. May I offer you a cigarette, princess? By the way, I wonder how Chase came off with his side show."

"Saunders tells me that he was near to being butchered, but luck was with him," said Deppingham. "His ship came home."

"It was a daring trick. I'm glad he pulled it off. He's a man, that fellow," said Browne. "See, princess, away up there in the mountain is his home. There's a light. See it? He keeps rather late hours, you see."

"Tell me about him," said the princess suddenly. She arose and walked to the vine covered wall, followed by Bobby Browne.

"I don't know much to tell you," said he. "He's made an enemy or two, and they are trying to drive him out. We've asked him down to here, but because we can't bear to think of following creature wasting his days in idleness, but he has so far declined our thanks. The idea is to begin by hating him. They distrust him, Brits say. Of course you know why we are here. You?"

"Every one knows, Mr. Browne. You are the most interesting quartet in the world just now. Every one is wondering how it is going to end. What a city you can't marry Lady Agnes!"

"Oh, I say," protested Browne. She laughed merrily.

"But how dull it must be for Mr. Chase! Does he complain?"

"I can't say that he does. Britt—that's my lawyer—Britt says he's never heard a murmur from him. He takes his medicine with a smile. I like that sort of fellow, and I wish he'd be a little more friendly."

"He has learned to know and keep his place," said she coolly. Perhaps she was thinking of his last night in the garden when he lay there in the darkness gleamed single, lonely, pathetic little light. "Isn't it rather odd, Mr. Browne, that his light should be burning at 2 o'clock in the morning? Is it his custom to sit up?"

"I've never noticed it before, now you speak of it. I hope nothing serious happened to him, but he may have been injured. I say, if you don't mind, I'll ask some one to telephone up to his place."

"Yes, do telephone," she broke in. "I am sure Lady Deppingham will approve. No, thank you. I will stand here while. It is cool, and I love the stars. Five minutes later he returned to her, accompanied by Lady Agnes. She was still looking at the stars.

"Lady Deppingham called him up," said Bobby.

"And he answered in person," said her ladyship. "He seemed surprised for a moment, but he knew, he knew, and then he laughed—yes, laughed in my face, although it was such a long way off. I asked him if he was ill or had been hurt. He said he was better in his life and hadn't a scratch. He laughed—I suppose to show me that he was all right. Then he asked me to thank you for bringing a worship. You saved his life. Really one would think you were his hero, and he would do anything like that. I never heard anything sweeter than the way he said good night to me. There!"

The light in the bungalow bobbed mysteriously for an instant and then went out.

"How far is it from here?" asked the princess abruptly.

"Nearly two miles as the crow flies, only there are no crows here. Five miles by the road, I fancy. Isn't it, Bobby?"

"I call him Bobby, you know, when we are all on good terms. I don't see why I shouldn't if you stop to think how near he helped me married to each other why he is at this very instant."

"I wonder if help could reach him quickly in the event of an attack?"

"It could if he'd have the kindness to notify us by phone," said Browne.

"But he wouldn't telephone to us," said Lady Deppingham ruefully. "He's not so communicative as that."

"Surely he would call upon you for help if he."

"You don't know him, Genera."

The princess smiled in a vague sort of way. "I've met him quite informally, if you remember."

"It should say it was informally. It's the most delicious story I've ever heard. You must tell it to Mr. Browne, or, if all about the enemy in Thorburn's Mr. Browne. There's your wife calling, Bobby. She wants you to tell that story again about the bishop who rang the bell."

The next morning the captain of the King's Own came ashore and was taken to the chateau for dinner. Late in the afternoon the marquis and his party, saying farewell to the princess and the revived leucates, put out to the yacht and steamed away in the wake of the great warship. The yacht was to return in the month to pick up the princess.

Genera, her maid, her men and her boxes, her poddle and her deachdown were left behind for the month of March—not without misgiving. It must be said, for the marquis, her uncle, was not disposed to look upon the island situation as a spot of long continued peace.

"You won't be able to get help as cleverly and as easily as that American chap got it last night," said the marquis. "Warships don't browse around like gulls, you know. Karl will never forgive me. I love you here."

"Karl is of a very forgiving nature, uncle, dear," said Genera sweetly. "He forgave you for defending Mr."

"I hope no harm comes to you here in this lonely place!"

Chase, because you are such a nice Englishman. I've induced him to forgive Mr. Chase because he's such a nice American—although Mr. Chase doesn't seem to know it and I'm quite sure Karl would shake his hand if he should come upon him anywhere. Lord Deppingham stood beside her on the pier as the ship party waved its adieu to the yacht.

"By Jove, Genera, I hope no harm comes to you here in this lonely place," said he, a look of anxiety in his honest eyes. "There goes our salvation if any rumpus should come up here. Karl said last night, 'Lucky he's out of debt. The church is only 22 by 30 feet and has sometimes been called Milverton's Little Church Around the Corner.'"

"He owes us something for the warship we delivered to him last night," said Bobby. "He said he intended to give his warship story, after all, thanks to the King's Own and Brits."

"And the fairy princess," added Lady Deppingham.

"I am doubly glad I came if you include me in the miracle," said Genera, shuddering a little as she looked at the long, narrow, dark, and cold warship story, after all, thanks to the King's Own and Brits.

"I'll tell it to you tonight, my children," said the princess as they started for the palanquins.

Hollingsworth Chase dodged into the American box just in time to escape the charge of spying.

The Riches of the Jozeys.

Lord Jozeys, whose letter on the subject has surprised the readers of the Liberal party, is a man who has both inherited and made enormous wealth. He is the richest of the Jozeys spring from the eastlands of Durham. Lord Jozeys can, in fact, truly claim to be the heir of a conqueror. The world, thousands of men work every day in his pits. Some years ago Lord Jozeys's firm took a lease of Lord Durham's pits. The price paid, as announced at the time, was $5,000,000, but the coal he has since sold has made him a fortune of more than two years' paid off the capital expenditure.

A white pine will measure twenty-five feet at twenty years and gain twenty-five feet more in the next ten years.

The smallest tree in the world is the Greenland birch. Its height is less than that of a man and it covers a radius of two or three feet.

The pest of British Columbia forests is a plant called the devil's club. It is a species which when the enter the forest break off and produce poison of sounds, which water.

SIRENS AND SONS.

Prince Tei Hsen, head of China's navy administration, says it is making a tour of Europe to study general war conditions there.

At fourteen years of age Altham (Miss) was not read big words, but at twenty-five he was one of the biggest men in the Illinois legislature.

Edward Swetelle of Farmington, Me., who is thirteen years old, saved a cord of stick wood in seven hours, cutting each stick twice. His friends think this is a record for a boy of his age.

Deaven Stillman has just celebrated his fortieth year of service on the New York Sun staff, but still sits up with the youngest cub after the paper has gone to press and talks about the wonderful days of old.

The new commander in chief of the United States Army of the Republic, Samuel H. Van Sant, is a native of Illinois and served in the Ninth Illinois cavalry. His later life has been spent in Minnesota, of which state he was governor from 1901 to 1905.

Herbert J. Gladstone is mentioned as the probable first governor general of the United States. Mr. Gladstone has not been considered a great success as secretary for home affairs, and there have been many hints of his resignation in another capacity.

For fifty-one years Isaac W. Hallam has served the same telephone company at Wilmington, Del. During all that time he has never missed a day at his desk, with the exception of a few days of one week that he took in 1894 for a honeymoon. Mr. Hallam is now in his eighty-second year.

Things Theatrical.

Ada Rehan, who spent some months in London, has returned to this country.

Cecil Lean and Florence Holbrook will star in a comedy called "Bright Eyes."

John Eckert Goodman, the author of "The Text," has written a new play called "Mother."

The revision of "The Return of Eve" is now being prepared.

George V. Hobart and Victor Herbert have collaborated on a play called "Sweet Sixteen," in which Willis F. Swanton will have a leading role.

Charles Richman, who is to be leading man for Mary Manning, plays the role of a newspaper reporter in the first act of a new play, "A Man's Word."

Church and Clergy.

Young Louis Wolf, a Klown child, is a Baptist minister. He is a Christian graduate and reads his Greek testament every morning.

The Sunday church in Milwaukee is out of debt. The church is only 22 by 30 feet and has sometimes been called Milwaukee's Little Church Around the Corner.

Rev. Mark B. Shaw, one of the most popular ministers of San Bernardino, Cal., has resigned as pastor of the First church. He intends to engage in the undertaking business.

There is one church in New York city where the bar, the rent office, is a part of the church. It is a colored church and has many quarters west of Ninth avenue. One man makes the collection.

Short Stories.

A cubic foot of marble weighs 160 pounds.

Three-fourths of typhoid patients are under thirty.

Cowles in Horneo are indentured at $10 to $20 per year, with board and clothing.

Australian boomersangs and noiseless guns are both now seen in the same New York shop window.

In its matter of medicines and chemicals, the United States has four times the trade in Canada that Great Britain does.

Alaska has three times the placer gold of California, but California has produced in fifty years $1,000,000,000 in gold, and Alaska will produce three times as much when properly developed.

Well-Known on the Wolds.

William Moore, a postman, who died recently at Hovingham, near Malton, England, is said to have walked 226,500 miles during the forty years he was in the service of the post office at Malton. Only one other man is said to have made his long daily journey across the Wolds with his letters. That was in the great storm of February, 1860, when the snowdrifts were twenty feet deep.

Why Actors Wear Long Hair.

Marshall Hall, K.C., at the last dinner of the Playgoers' Club in London, referred to an early statute under which actors found wandering were liable to be branded through the right ear. He said that that was the reason so many members of the theatrical profession still wore their hair long. They said it was a concealment of a mutilation.

TO PRESENT ANTIGONE

MARGARET ANGLIN UNDER-TAKES A BIG TASK.

While Other Actors and Actresses Are Enjoying Their Vacations Canadian Woman is Out in California Superintending a Huge Production of Greek Tragedy—Made Her Hit as Roxane

The Greek Theatre of the University of California at Berkeley next month will be the scene of a remarkable performance given by Margaret Anglin, the great Canadian actress, and a specially selected company of players. Miss Anglin, who is conceded to be one of the world's most talented artists as well as a woman of pronounced beauty, will present Antigone, and the single performance will be given under the auspices of the university itself. The greatest pains have been taken to have the mounting and staging correct in every detail, all of which, needless to say, involves a lot of hard work on Miss Anglin's part. But this character, a young woman whose few years at the head of her own company have resulted in achievements of the most commendable type, does not understand the meaning of the word rest, let alone idleness. Instead of spending the summer in the mountains or at the seashore, as do most of the successful play folk, she is starting the Pacific coast, much to the delight of westerners.

Miss Anglin, who is but 34 years old, made her first professional appearance at the Academy of Music in New York in the fall of 1904. She was born in Ontario, her father being speaker of the House of Commons at the time, and before she went to study dramatic art and to prepare herself for a stage career, she was educated in a convent in Montreal.

It was in the fall of 1906, as Roxane in Richard Massieu's production of Le Train de Bergère, that Miss Anglin became known throughout the country as one of the foremost emotional actresses of the day. Of late years her work in The Great Divide and The Awakening of Helena Ritchie have left nothing to be desired and have earned for her the unstinted praise of critics and theatregoers alike.

There is one church in New York city where the bar, the rent office, is a part of the church. It is a colored church and has many quarters west of Ninth avenue. One man makes the collection.

A cubic foot of marble weighs 160 pounds.

Three-fourths of typhoid patients are under thirty.

Cowles in Horneo are indentured at $10 to $20 per year, with board and clothing.

Australian boomersangs and noiseless guns are both now seen in the same New York shop window.

In its matter of medicines and chemicals, the United States has four times the trade in Canada that Great Britain does.

Alaska has three times the placer gold of California, but California has produced in fifty years $1,000,000,000 in gold, and Alaska will produce three times as much when properly developed.

Well-Known on the Wolds.

William Moore, a postman, who died recently at Hovingham, near Malton, England, is said to have walked 226,500 miles during the forty years he was in the service of the post office at Malton. Only one other man is said to have made his long daily journey across the Wolds with his letters. That was in the great storm of February, 1860, when the snowdrifts were twenty feet deep.

Why Actors Wear Long Hair.

Marshall Hall, K.C., at the last dinner of the Playgoers' Club in London, referred to an early statute under which actors found wandering were liable to be branded through the right ear. He said that that was the reason so many members of the theatrical profession still wore their hair long. They said it was a concealment of a mutilation.

A valuable Collection.

What is described by Dr. Doughty's Dominion archivist as the best collection of medals in the world, has just been placed in the archives of the British Government. It is the gift of the British Government, and comprises every medal struck during Queen Victoria's reign, as well as every class issued. There are 214 medals in all, many of them being of gold. Their value sentimentally and intrinsically is very great.

Important to Farmers and Stockmen

The farmer or rancher who wishes to enlarge or improve his herd by securing some of the well bred stuff now being put on the market, because of the crowding out of the big ranchers, will upon application to the Live Stock Commissioner at Edmonton, be put in touch with parties who are offering their stock for sale. Several ranchers have already given notice of their intention to reduce the size of their herds or sell out entirely.

Most of the herds reported are of the shorthorn or Hereford breeding, or are crosses of these breeds. Practically all are bred for beef production, and being range bred are much better able to take care of themselves than are the farm bred that finds its way out here from the east.

These animals will be of little use to dairymen.

Address all enquiries to the undersigned in care of the Department of Agriculture, Edmonton.

W. F. STEVENS,
Live Stock Commissioner.

What We are Coming to Chug! chug! Brrr! brrr! Honk-honk! Zip-zip! whizz! bang! wallop!

The pedestrian paused at the intersection of two busy thoroughfares, and looked about him. A motor was rushing at him on one side, a motor-cycle on another, and a motor-bus threatened him in his rear, while a taxi-cab prodded his waistcoat buttons. Zing! zing! He looked up and saw, directly above, a runaway aeroplane in rapid descent. There was but one chance.

He was standing upon a man hole cover. Quickly seizing it, he lifted the lid and jumped into the hole, just in time to be run over by an electric underground tube train. — Tit Bits

The White slave Traffic

Mr. Chas. W. Clarkson of 819 First Street, Edmonton was in town attending the Monomite Camp Meeting and incidentally canvassing for the book "Fighting the Traffic in Young Girls" or "War on the White Slave Trade."

He has met with great success in the sale of this book which is not to be wondered at when the importance of the shameful traffic now carried on with young girls is considered. The book gives a complete and detailed account of the shameless traffic in young girls, the methods by which the procurers and panders lure young girls away from home and sell them to keepers of dives. The magnitude of the organization and its workings. How to combat this hideous monster. How to save your girl. How to save your boy. What you can do to help wipe out this cause to humanity. A book designed to awake on the sleeping and protect the innocent. Every parent should have this book in their home, which can be secured by applying as above. The price is $1.50.

The Modern Ten Commandments

First—Thou shalt not go away from home to do thy trading, nor thy son nor thy daughter.

Second—Thou shalt patronize thy home merchant and thy home printer, yea verily doth not thy home printer spread over the glad tidings of thy goodness and thy greatness, and they shall patronize thee.

Third—Thou shalt employ thine own mechanics, that they may not be driven from home to find bread for their little ones, thou shalt consider him as thy neighbor above all them that dwell in a strange town.

Fourth—Thou shalt not ask for credit as the goods cost money and the merchant's brain is lardened with bills, his children clamor for bread, and his wife abideth at home for lack of such raiment as adorneth her sister. Blessed, say, thrice blessed, is the man that pays cash.

Fifth—Thou shalt not ask for reduced prices for thine influence, for behold guile is in your heart and thy merchant reddeneth it like an open book; he sheweth to thy clerks, ha! ha!

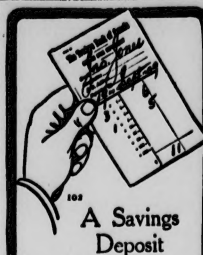

Sixth—Thou shalt do whatever lieth in thy power to encourage and promote the welfare of thine own town and thine own people.

Seventh—Thou shalt not suffer the voice of pride to overcome thee and if other towns entice thee consent thou not for thou mayest be deceived.

Eighth—Thou shalt spend thy earnings at home and they may return from whence they came and give nourishment to such as may come after thee.

Ninth—Thou shalt not bear false witness against the town wherein thou dwellest but speak well of it to all men.

Tenth—Thou shalt keep these commandments and teach them to your children, to the third and fourth generation that they may be made to flourish and grow in plenty when thou art laid to rest with thy fathers.—Selected.
